

Centre for Working World and Parental Leave

The Centre for Working World and Parental Leave advises expecting mothers, young parents and companies on legal protection of working mothers, parental leave and return to the work place and gives out information on each individual phase of family leave.

Our goals:

- To support company representatives and (expecting) parents through early and mutual planning of leave due to personal/family reasons.
- To advise small and mid-sized businesses how to plan the childbearing years of employees by alternative employment offers when re-entering the work force and in balancing work and family. This reduces costs for businesses.
- To support mothers and fathers in re-entering the work force and in achieving greater job security.
- To work closely together with the German Federal Employment Agency in order to find appropriate temporary workers for the time of leave and to reduce training costs through an Employment Agency programme.
- To keep the organisational hassles of the protection of working mothers and parental leave to a minimum for employees through the services of the Centre for Working World and Parental Leave.

Our services:

- Information kit for (expecting) parents and businesses
- Hotline
- Individual advice and moderation
- Up-to-date e-mail newsletters
- FAQs on our website
- Lectures and presentations
- The agency's website which features many of our services

The informational kits from our centre for (expecting) parents and businesses contain information on legal protection of working mothers, parental leave and re-entry into the world of employment and are specifically tailored to our target group with much practical advice. The service part of the kit contains guidelines for discussions between employers and employees and a pull-out checklist for planning for maternity leave and parental leave.
